Introduction

We regularly receive complaints about ambulance delays. NHS is under significant pressure to respond to ambulance calls. This is because we have to decide whether to invest in more ambulances.

It is important to be clear about what we can and cannot do. Trust (“WAST”) will investigate a complaint because they are responsible for the ambulance service. Where this situation arises, we will investigate the complaint.

What we can do

While each case is determined on the individual facts, we are more likely to investigate and uphold your complaint in the following circumstances:

- There is evidence to suggest that there were ambulances available to send to the call, but this was delayed due to the call being wrongly categorised by WAST, and this delay caused clinical harm to the patient.
- There is evidence to suggest that the call was correctly categorised, there was an ambulance available to send to the call, but WAST wrongly failed to allocate the ambulance to the call, and this delay caused clinical harm to the patient.
- Where there is evidence to suggest that there were no failings on the part of WAST, but there were no ambulances available to send to the call due to them being held outside hospitals, and there is evidence the delay caused clinical harm to the patient, we are unlikely to uphold a complaint against WAST as the reasons for the delay were outside its control. However, we may need to consider instead the actions of the relevant Health Board and whether it took appropriate actions to manage the pressures in its hospital(s) to release ambulances to attend calls.

What we cannot do

While each case is determined on the individual facts, we are unlikely to investigate and uphold your complaint in the following circumstances:

- There is no evidence that any delay caused clinical harm to the patient, notwithstanding that the delay may well have been distressing for the patient and/or their family.
- The evidence suggests that the relevant health board and WAST applied all relevant policies/procedures to address capacity issues in the relevant hospital(s), however, demand was such that even with all the measures being taken, there were still no ambulances available to send to the call.

Issues to bear in mind

The resources allocated to WAST and the wider NHS are political matters for the government to decide. We are unable to recommend that more resources are allocated to WAST or the health boards.

We will need to judge whether the treatment/care provided was of an appropriate standard and bearing in mind the setting in which it was being provided. For example, care provided in a general hospital would not be judged against the standards that would apply in a specialist unit. More information can be found on the Clinical Standards page, under the 'For Service Providers' tab.

Under Putting Things Right ("PTR"), WAST must consider if the person making the complaint (or the person they represent) has suffered harm due to it failing in its duty of care. If WAST considers that this is the case, it may offer you redress. This might include remedial treatment or financial compensation. Please note that we cannot refer a complaint back to the PTR process once we have started an investigation. If you want your complaint to be considered under PTR, you must do this before asking us to investigate your complaint.
